Cohen & Gresser Hires Partner in London to Expand Disputes Offering

Cohen & Gresser announces the expansion of its disputes offering with the appointment of Jumana Rahman as Partner in the firm's London office.

Jumana will lead Cohen & Gresser's UK commercial litigation practice. She has a particular focus on banking and financial services litigation and funds litigation, as well as judicial review claims. She brings over 20 years of experience acting for a range of clients in banking and financial services, investment and hedge funds, and large corporates, in proceedings in various jurisdictions including Antigua, the Bahamas, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, the Channel Islands, Cyprus, Hong Kong, Singapore, and the U.S. Jumana also has extensive experience representing Middle Eastern and African clients in complex international matters.

"I am delighted to welcome Jumana to Cohen & Gresser," said Jeffrey M Bronheim, Managing Partner of Cohen & Gresser's London office. "I have known and worked with Jumana on complex litigation matters for many years, and her experience further strengthens our offering and ability to help our clients succeed in resolving and winning disputes around the world. Jumana will also work closely with our white collar team on commercial disputes that increasingly arise from white collar assignments, providing our clients with integrated support across complex legal issues in the UK and international jurisdictions."

Jumana's appointment is the next step in the continued growth of Cohen & Gresser's UK presence. Launched in June 2018, the firm's London office now has a team of over a dozen lawyers and the ability to serve clients across international jurisdictions on commercial litigation, financial crime, investigations, sanctions, and funds, investments, and corporate transactions.

"I am excited to contribute to Cohen & Gresser's continued growth and success, and look forward to bringing my experience in cross-border commercial litigation to build our offering," said Jumana Rahman. "Cohen & Gresser is an ideal fit for me as it is an established practice that is looking to grow and expand internationally. I chose to join the firm's dynamic London office because of its high calibre team, who have already established a reputation for quality, integrity, and trustworthiness."

Prior to joining Cohen & Gresser, Jumana was counsel at Latham & Watkins in its London office. She has been recognised by Chambers and Partners for her securities litigation expertise.
