Adam Bramwell, Former Chief of Staff to Senator Coons, Joins Cohen & Gresser to Lead New Government Relations Practice

Bramwell Brings More Than 25 Years of Political Experience to C&G Clients

WASHINGTON (December 1, 2020) – International law firm Cohen & Gresser announced today that Adam Bramwell, former chief of staff and general counsel to Senator Christopher Coons (D-DE), has joined the firm's Washington, D.C. office and will lead the firm's new Government Relations practice. Adam has over 25 years of high-level political and lobbying experience, and has close relationships with a network of influential policymakers in both the new administration and the U.S. Congress.

Cohen & Gresser's Government Relations practice will advise clients on actual and potential changes to legislation and regulations, and will help companies across all industries achieve their policy objectives.

"We are very pleased to launch our new Government Relations practice," said Lawrence T Gresser, global managing partner of Cohen & Gresser. "Adam has built a strong reputation for his strategic acumen. His experience forming coalitions across party lines and building consensus will provide our clients with tremendous value as he leads this new practice."

As chief of staff and general counsel to Senator Coons, Adam led the legislative and political strategy for the Senator's top policy priorities – working with prominent Democrats, as well as offices across party lines to build political support and enact legislation. Prior to serving in Senator Coons' office, Adam held key roles in the Senate as the general counsel to the Secretary of the Senate for 13 years and as counsel to the Senate Select Committee on Ethics.

"Having served the leadership for both parties on Capitol Hill, Adam is well known and well respected in Washington. I am thrilled to welcome him to our D.C. office," said Melissa H Maxman, managing partner of the firm's Washington, D.C. office. "The launch of a Government Relations practice is the logical next step for our office, and I believe our clients will be well-served by Adam's invaluable experience and connections in Washington."

Adam will also support clients as a practicing lawyer. He will serve as a key advisor to clients on government contracts and the development, implementation, and operation of legal and business ethics programs.

"I am excited to join a law firm with an incredible reputation for high-quality work and elite client service," said Adam. "It is an honor to be tasked with leading the firm's new Government Relations practice, and I look forward to working with the firm's distinguished attorneys to provide clients with both legislative and legal support."

Before joining Cohen & Gresser, Adam served as managing director at an international public strategy firm. He counseled clients on political and organizational strategy, testimony, foreign relations, judiciary and appropriation issues, budgets, audits, personnel, and strategic and tactical planning.
