

Alice Allen is an associate in Cohen & Gresser's London office and a member of the firm's Litigation & Arbitration and White Collar Defense & Regulation practice groups. She has experience advising on complex, high-value commercial litigation and arbitration matters across multiple jurisdictions.

Before joining Cohen & Gresser, Alice practiced at Travers Smith, where she represented prominent corporate clients in high-stakes commercial disputes. She has extensive experience preparing cases for trial and hearings, developing procedural and evidentiary strategies, managing complex disclosure processes, and working closely with fact and expert witnesses in both litigation and arbitration matters.

Alice is also dedicated to pro bono advocacy. She has led cases supporting survivors of human trafficking and domestic abuse, securing them compensation and/or non-molestation orders and has experience supporting clients through complex family, criminal, and regulatory proceedings.

Alice holds a First Class LLB from the University of Leeds and completed the Legal Practice Course with Distinction at BPP Law School.
