

Alix Crocheton is a lawyer awaiting admission to the Bar in Cohen & Gresser's Paris office and a member of the white-collar defense and litigation practices. She focuses her practice on business criminal law, compliance, regulatory investigations, and complex civil and commercial litigation.

Alix has experience advising clients on internal investigations, regulatory matters, and criminal proceedings, particularly in the areas of corporate crime and financial regulation.

Prior to joining Cohen & Gresser, she worked with firms including Bougartchev Moyne Associés, De Castro & Stasse, and Coat Haut de Sigy de Roux Minor, where she contributed to high-stakes white collar defense, litigation, and compliance matters.

Alix earned an LL.M. in General Law from McGill University in Montreal. She also holds a Master's in Business Law (Magistère Juriste d'Affaires DJCE) and a Bachelor's in Law from Université Paris-Panthéon-Assas.

She is fluent in French and English.
