

Alix Meslier de Rocan is a lawyer awaiting admission to the Bar in Cohen & Gresser's White Collar Defense and Investigations practice in Paris.

Alix advises clients on matters involving white collar crime, internal investigations, regulatory enforcement, and complex criminal and commercial disputes.

Prior to joining the firm, she gained experience at several prominent litigation and white collar practices, including Bredin Prat, Cabinet Kiejman & Marembert, and Visconti & Grundler. She also completed internships at Mayer Brown, the Paris Commercial Court, and the Paris-based Conseil d'État and Cour de cassation law firm Le Prado & Gilbert, and worked within the legal department of Publicis in New York.

Alix completed her legal training following studies at Sciences Po Paris, where she earned a Master's degree in Economic Law with a specialization in Global Business Law and Governance. As part of her studies, she participated in academic exchanges with Columbia Law School, Sorbonne University, and Rutgers University.

She is fluent in French and English.
