

Should the EU's Right to be Forgotten Ruling be Extended to the US?

EU privacy regulators want the right to be forgotten – the delisting of information on the internet – to go global. Join the New York Intellectual Property Law Association (@NYIPLA) Internet & Privacy Committee Co-Chairs Kevin Moss and Karen Bromberg in conjunction with Bloomberg BNA on a panel of privacy professionals on Thursday, April 23rd at 1:00 PM EST, for a Twitter discussion surrounding the issues stemming from the EU's Right to be Forgotten ruling and whether this ruling could extend to US search engines.

Follow the discussion via Twitter, using the hashtags #NYIPLA and/or #R2BF

Moderator: Omer Tene

Omer is Vice President of Research and Education at the International Association of Privacy Professionals. He is an Affiliate Scholar at the Stanford Center for Internet and Society and a Senior Fellow at the Future of Privacy Forum.

www.OmerTene.com

@OmerTene

Panelists:

Don Aplin

Senior Legal Editor, Bloomberg BNA Privacy & Security Law Report

@PrivateAplin

Kevin M. Moss, Counsel

Intellectual Property & Technology Department,
Kramer Levin Naftalis & Frankel LLP

@KMossNYC

Jef Ausloos

Doctoral Researcher at the University of Leuven, Faculty of Law; Privacy Expert

@Jausl00s

Karen H Bromberg, Partner

Head of Intellectual Property & Technology Group,
Cohen & Gresser LLP

@KarenHBromberg